Delay in Divorce Action Explained by Wife's Counsel, Who Blames Husband-Decision Reserved.

Lawyer Allen Caruthers, counsel for William C. Clopton, a lawyer, who has een sued for an absolute divorce by Josephine Clopton, and also counsel fo Mrs. Minnie T. Riker, who is named by the plaintiff as the co-respondent in the action, asked Justice Greenbaum in the Court to-day to dismiss the complaint for lack of prosecution by

The case, the lawve rsaid, had been at issue for over a year, but no notice of trial had been served on the defendant or co-respondent. The plaintiff more than a year ago went to her husband and got from him consent to discontinue her suit, but no action had been taken to have an order of discontinuance entered.

Justice Greenbaum inquired why the defendant had not noticed the case for

Mr. Caruthers said he did not understand that he should have done so. He had some years ago secured a divorce from the plaintiff in North Dakota, where she appeared by counse!, on the charge of cruelty and desertion.

Sixteen months after this decree was granted Mrs. Ciopton moved in the North Dakota courts to have the decree set aside on the ground that she had not entered an appearance to the the s vit. The decree was set aside. but Mr. Clopton had the order vacating it also set aside on the ground that his wife had practiced fraud and deceit on the court. The case was then taken to the Supreme Court of North Dakota, which confirmed this decision.
